COURSE CONTENT

This interactive course provides essential business and financial information for sports coaches and their clients to ensure both parties satisfy government regulations and requirements.

We detail the requirements for the various ways coaches can be paid - self-employment, employment, casual work, volunteering with expenses - with particular focus on the strict tax self-employment guidelines that, if not satisfied, can result in a hefty tax bill for coach and client. We outline how you can assess your relationship with your coach/client to see if it meets the guidelines without having to contact the tax office. We also outline the various types of flexible employment and casual worker options available when paying a coach, including a detailed look at the zero hours employment contract.

We provide an overview of the tax inspection system including advice on minimising the possibility of inspection. We detail the Health and Safety and insurance requirements for coaches and clubs including a review of liability and the legal status options open to coaches and clubs.
